Charting the LifeCourse

An Overview of the Charting the LifeCourse Framework and Tools

October 13 (part 1) and October 20 (part 2) from 4-5:15 pm (ET)

or

October 16, 2021 (part 1 and 2) from 10-12 noon (ET)

The Charting the LifeCourse framework is an authentic grassroots activity, driven by the core belief that “all people have the right to live, love, work, play and pursue their life aspirations.” Driven by the quest to answer the question, “what do families need to know to support their family member with a disability across the lifespan,” the framework has evolved into a transformative human-centric movement impacting policies and practices across the country. The framework helps individuals and families of all abilities and all ages develop a vision for a good life, think about what they need to know and do, identify how to find or develop supports, and discover what it takes to live the lives they want to live.

Guest Speaker: Barbara Sapharas - Ohio Ambassador, Charting the LifeCourse; National Team Member, Charting the LifeCourse - University of Missouri-Kansas City (UMKC)

Learning Objectives: Provide an overview of the Charting the LifeCourse framework and how to use the framework to support and empower individuals with disabilities, their families, and education and agency personnel to assess, plan, and identify supports and services for a child with disabilities

Target Audience: Parents, guardians, families, educators, related services providers, and agency personnel
