

ADVANCING WELLNESS and RESILIENCE in EDUCATION

Back to School: How to Build School-Family Partnership

Project AWARE Ohio would like to share an information brief entitled Family Engagement: Building Family-School Partnership that has been developed by our partners at The Ohio State University's College of Education and Human Ecology. This information brief provides tips and skills for engaging families, a helpful topic to consider as many professionals, caregivers, and students begin the new school year. The information brief outlines what school professionals can do to build their family engagement skills by truly involving parents in their student's education. It includes resources such as professional and family versions of the Family Engagement Scale, a resource that school professionals can use to identify skills to develop and create an action plan in order to engage families to support the mental and behavioral health of children, and a detailed guide which includes steps and guidelines to help schools develop a plan for partnering with families to support children's mental and behavioral health and wellbeing, among other resources and tools.
